ACTIVITIES

Mr. Lemoncello could have opened his library in a more traditional way. Why do you think he chose such an elaborate game? What did he want the contestants to take away from the experience? Have a class discussion.

Escape from Mr. Lemoncello's Library is written in third-person omniscient. Have students select a favorite scene from the novel and rewrite it in first person from the perspective of a character of their choice. Have students share with a partner and discuss how the scene read differently when the point of view was changed.

Have students prepare a presentation on what they learned about the Dewey decimal system from Escape from Mr. Lemoncello's Library and their own research. Invite a librarian in to hear the presentations and to share the great things they have going on in the library that might interest students.

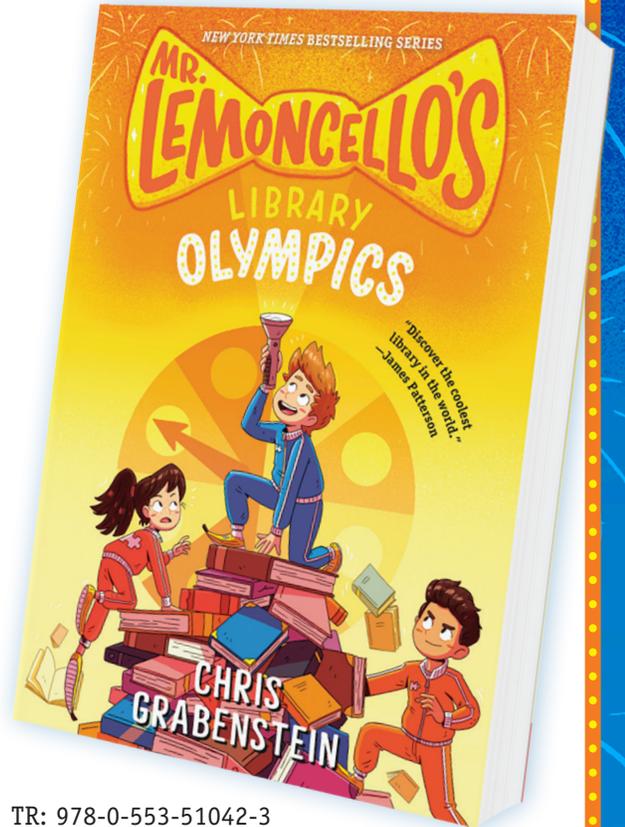

Welcome, boys and girls, readers of all ages, to the first-ever Library Olympics! The world-famous game maker Luigi Lemoncello is at it again! This time Mr. Lemoncello has invited teams from all across America to compete. But something suspicious is going on . . . books are missing from Mr. Lemoncello's library. Is someone trying to censor what the kids are reading?! Now it's not just a game—can Mr. Lemoncello find the real champions of libraries? In between figuring out mind-boggling challenges, Kyle and the other teams will have to band together to get to the bottom of this mystery. Let the games begin!

ACTIVITIES

Host a school reading night focused on the Dewey decimal system. Have each classroom in the school vote on a favorite class within the Dewey decimal system. Classrooms will decorate their room for that theme and create a flyer about that theme to share with community members who attend the event. Students can dress accordingly and share books from the class with visitors.

Let students select one class from the Dewey decimal system that they would like to explore. After learning more, have the students select a career relevant to that class to research further. For example, if they are studying the 700 class, they may choose to learn more about architecture. Have students create questions for an architect, and then set up in-person, Skype, or written interviews with experts or people in the field so students can ask questions.

Celebrate a banned book! Mr. Lemoncello's Library Olympics celebrates books that have been banned in certain places. Have students check the American Library Association's list of the ten most-banned books to see if they have read any over the last several years. Have students choose a book that they know from the list and write a persuasive essay about why the book shouldn't be banned.

On your marks. Get set. Lemon, cello, GO! Everyone's favorite game maker, Mr. Lemoncello, is testing out his new FACT-FINDING FRENZY game! Kyle and the other lucky finalists will go on a great race—by bicycle, bookmobile, and corporate banana jet!—to find facts about famous Americans. But when a few surprising “facts” surface about Mr. Lemoncello, it might be GO TO JAIL and LOSE A TURN all at once! Could Kyle's hero be a fraud?

ACTIVITIES

In Mr. Lemoncello's Great Library Race, Kyle and his friends learn about how some extremely successful people experienced a lot of failure that eventually led to their success. Have students research a successful person who they find interesting, and make a presentation showing how that person learned from their failures. Host a day during which students can present their findings.

After your class has finished reading the book, have students conduct interviews. Partners will select a character from the book and interview them as a local television reporter. After they have written out and discussed the interview, have them record it using a digital camera or other device.

Mr. Lemoncello is leaving the library and going LIVE across the nation with his latest game. Kyle can't wait to audition, but only a lucky few will get to compete in front of millions of viewers in a completely immersive new breakout game—with real kids as the playing pieces! Nothing is ever as it seems with Mr. Lemoncello, and the clock is ticking! Can Kyle and his friends crack the codes in time to win it all?

ACTIVITY: HOST THE ULTIMATE GAME SHOW!

Separate students into three or four teams. Give them five minutes to come up with a fun team name. Keep track of the team names and scores.

Read THE RULES

There are two categories of questions for this game: trivia and riddles.

- The game will consist of several rounds: round one will be trivia questions, round two will be riddles, and so on.
- Each team will have two minutes to answer their question or riddle.
- If the team is unable to answer a question or if they answer incorrectly, another team may steal their point. To do this, members of other teams must raise their hands as soon as the group leader says the answer is incorrect. The first person to raise their hand gets to answer. If that person guesses incorrectly, the question may pass to someone from a different team. Each correct answer is worth one point.
- The team with the most points when you run out of riddles and questions wins.
- In the event of a tie, choose a random trivia question. The first team to provide the correct answer wins.
